MINISTER'S FOREWORD

Each and every day in my role as the Minister for Women and the Minister for the Prevention of Family Violence, I have the great pleasure of meeting and working with dynamic, intelligent, compassionate and fearsome women doing incredible work in their fields.

This year I am privileged to be inducting 20 of these remarkable Victorian women onto the 2016 Victorian Honour Roll of Women.

The Victorian Honour Roll of Women acknowledges and celebrates the wide-ranging and lasting contributions of women in our community who have demonstrated outstanding leadership and excellence in their fields of expertise, interest and endeavour.

The 2016 inductees demonstrate the diversity of contributions made by women across all sectors of our society. From champions of gender equality, human rights and family violence prevention, to leaders and innovators making great strides in education, health, law, arts and media, these inspirational women have contributed countless hours to making a significant and lasting difference within Victoria and beyond. Many are dedicated social justice activists who are committing their time to addressing disadvantage and reaching out to those in need.

MINISTER'S FOREWORD

Victoria has a rich and captivating history of women's achievements through struggle and perseverance. It is important that we continue to publically celebrate and recognise the achievements of women in our society. By doing so, we inspire future generations of young women to realise their potential and we build a society based on respect and non-violence, where women and girls can participate equally in the economy, their community and civic life.

The Honour Roll is a reminder of the strength of women in Victoria. These women join a growing list of more than 500 women who have been inducted onto the Honour Roll since it began in 2001. I hope you will join me in congratulating the new inductees.

I encourage you to read the personal stories of this extraordinary group of Victorian women and hope you will find inspiration in their many accomplishments.

INDUCTEES

As a registered nurse with a keen interest in children's health, Simone has been a long time passionate supporter of medical research and the work of institutes such as St Vincent's Institute of Medical Research. The primary focus of Simone's career has been focused on advocating for an end to food insecurity. She has been instrumental in leading the growth of SecondBite, expanding its scope from redistributing high quality surplus fresh food to the community, to also building community skills in food preparation and nutrition.

An extraordinarily sustainable way of reducing the rising problem of food insecurity, Simone's work with SecondBite has since paved the way for the introduction of many other successful community programs, such as FoodMate and Fresh NED. Over the years Simone has demonstrated that by providing practical skills and knowledge, and demonstrating that cooking and healthy eating can be enjoyable, the community can help to break the cycle of disadvantage.

Profoundly, Simone has been central to developing a food rescue model that is scalable, collaborative, and can be adapted to meet local needs. Reflecting Simone's strong belief in collaboration, SecondBite works with other organisations, such as Rotary and the Australian Red Cross, to deliver Community Connect—SecondBite's innovative food rescue model—in a wide variety of communities across Victoria.

Simone's dedication to making healthy food available to every individual was recognised earlier this year when Simone and her colleagues received a global award as 2015 Social Entrepreneur of the Year from the Schwab Foundation—the sister organisation of the World Economic Forum. Simone and her colleagues were the only Australians to be recognised.

Ms Simone Carson

Simone Carson took action eleven years ago to address the growing problem of food insecurity and waste in Victoria, founding SecondBite—a sustainable food rescue charity that has since grown to become a successful national operation.

Throughout her career Lisa has devoted her time to consistently advocate for the development of a more progressive national agenda for women. She has actively campaigned for workplace equality for women by lobbying for more flexible work arrangements; structural improvements to the superannuation system; and mentoring women into leadership positions.

Lisa has a Bachelor of Business in Industrial Relations, a Diploma of Community Development and is a proud member of various boards including HESTA; the Community Services and Health Industry Training Board; and the National Committee of EMILY's List.

As the first female executive president of the Australian Services Union's Victorian and Tasmanian Authorities and Services Branch, Lisa has made exceptional contributions in her field of work. One of her most noteworthy achievements was her outstanding leadership during a landmark campaign to achieve equal pay for social and community services workers. Significantly, this important work secured pay rises for many female workers.

Under Lisa's leadership in 2010, world-first entitlements in an Enterprise Agreement for leave and other workplace supports for workers experiencing family violence were achieved, recognising that the workplace can play a major role in reducing violence against women. Since then, Lisa has campaigned to extend similar enforceable workplace entitlements, which now cover more than 1 million Australian workers.

In 2014, in recognition of Lisa's outstanding contribution to, and leadership on, the Social and Community Services Equal Pay case, Lisa became the inaugural recipient of the Zelda D'Aprano Activist Award.

Ms Lisa Darmanin

Lisa Darmanin has a long and proud career as an activist for women's equality. With more than 17 years experience campaigning for women's rights, Lisa's work has made a significant impact on social and community services and has generated long-term benefits for women across the nation.

A former Australian netball representative, Noeleen has since held senior management positions across a range of sports and sporting events, including netball and the Melbourne Commonwealth Games. She sets an outstanding example for women across the nation and beyond, as a successful leader, representing her state and country both on and off the court.

Noeleen's commitment to mentoring and supporting young women to thrive in Australia's sporting sector is a result of her strong belief in the need for young women to be given the same opportunities as their male counterparts—to be their best and achieve every success on the Australian and international sporting stages.

Throughout her career, Noeleen's achievements and contributions have changed the destiny of Australia's highest female-participant sport. Netball is now well-regarded at local, national and international levels, with Australia sharing its expertise, knowledge and resources worldwide.

Noeleen is respected within the sector for her honesty, integrity and transparency, and her contribution has led to significant cultural change in netball.

In 2006 Noeleen was elected President and Chair of Netball Australia. During this period she has been instrumental in leading governance reform in netball, establishing the Netball Australia Nomination and Remuneration Committee. Her vision and commitment to reform has also played a major role in the establishment of the successful ANZ Championship, which continues to build momentum as the world's best netball league.

Ms Noeleen Dix

One of Australia's leading and most highly respected sports administrators, Noeleen Dix is a proud Victorian who has dedicated her career to serving the community through sport.

Throughout her career, Doseena has demonstrated great leadership and courage. Her resilience, humility and generosity to others is evident in her many achievements and the endeavours she continues to pursue.

In the early 1970s, Doseena began her nursing and midwifery career at the Royal Brisbane Hospital, before joining her husband in Papua New Guinea where she volunteered as the sole health care worker for a remote community in the Highlands. The community was without access to medical resources or assistance.

In 1996 Doseena and her family moved to Melbourne where she began her advocacy to increase health practitioners' awareness of Aboriginal health issues. She also undertook the role of Clinical Care Coordinator of the Indigenous Health team at Yarra Valley Community Health in Healesville.

Doseena has a Masters degree in Nursing and has recently submitted her PhD research into post-natal depression in Victorian Aboriginal women, at the Australian Catholic University. Through Doseena's research greater awareness and understanding of Aboriginal post-natal depression will inform Aboriginal health policy: another significant and long-lasting contribution to Aboriginal communities.

A particularly inspiring and remarkable achievement in Doseena's career is the lead role she played in the development of the 'Good Food, Great Kids' initiative. The three-year national child nutrition project aimed to improve the nutritional status of Aboriginal children and families in the Yarra Valley. It was successful in building the community's capacity around nutrition, namely to increase awareness of the importance of nutrition and improved nutritional intake. The program was highly regarded by the Victorian community, winning the Victorian Government Public Health Care Award for Community Engagement.

Doseena's leadership role in establishing the Healesville Indigenous Community Services Association (HICSA) has also made a considerable impact. It has provided the Healesville Aboriginal community with a welcoming, culturally affirming place by providing a central point of contact for community members, both Aboriginal and non-Aboriginal. HICSA provides information, services and programs that focus on building a healthy, strong and skilled community in Victoria.

Mrs Doseena Fergie (nee Bin Garape)

Doseena was born on Thursday Island and has Aboriginal, Torres Strait Islander and Moluccan ancestry. For the past 20 years Doseena has lived in Victoria with her family where she has dedicated her time to building strong, healthy and skilled Aboriginal communities.

Before beginning her political career, Sherryl was heavily involved in serving her local community. She has always been driven by her commitment to overcoming social and economic disadvantage, giving every individual a fair go, improving women's rights and preserving Victoria's natural assets.

Sherryl began her career in politics in 1989 when she was first elected to the Victorian Parliament as the Member for Greensborough. Over the span of her career, Sherryl undertook appointments as Minister for Environment and Conservation, Minister for Women's Affairs and Minister for Community Services. In 2004, Sherryl was appointed Victoria's first Minister for Children, before retiring at the end of 2006.

Sherryl has an impressive record of achievement through her Ministerial responsibilities and has provided significant long-term benefits for the Victorian community and the environment. Throughout her political career, Sherryl introduced many reforms which fundamentally changed the principals on which policies and services operated in Victoria.

Her experience as a former Victorian Minister for Community Services, Women's Affairs, and Environment and Conservation resulted in the establishment of Marine National Parks and Box Ironbark National Parks; the development of the Women's Safety Strategy as a whole-of-government response to violence against women; and the establishment of the Victorian Children's Council.

In July 2015, following her retirement from Parliamentary life, Sherryl was appointed to the 'Our Watch' Board, the national agency to prevent violence against women and their children. Sherryl's committee work since retirement has reinforced her Parliamentary contribution as she continues serving the community with distinction through her work on the board of 'Our Watch'.

Ms Sherryl Garbutt

Sherryl Garbutt's contribution to Victoria has been both strategic and effective, with a long-standing commitment to protecting the environment and championing women's rights and social justice.

Virginia's journey and legacy in the family violence sector is one of determination, altruism and courage. It was in the late 1970s when Virginia took on a position at the first women's refuge in Victoria—the Women's Liberation Halfway House (WLHH). After her time at WLHH, Virginia was an active participant in the collective effort to secure funding for the first Women's Refuge Referral Service—an early incarnation of Safe Steps.

She was also a member of the group which initiated and led the campaign to save the Queen Victoria Hospital site. The Queen Victoria Women's Centre now stands on this site and is currently home to a number of women's services.

Virginia worked at the Domestic Violence Resource Centre Victoria (DVRCV) for 26 years, and in the past six years in the role of Executive Officer.

Throughout her career, Virginia's contribution to raising community awareness of the prevalence of violence against women has made a positive and indelible impact on the communities and organisations she has served.

Her contribution to DVRCV has resulted in the organisation's reputation for excellence and allowed it to contribute in new and valuable ways to prevent and respond to family violence.

Under her leadership, DVRCV has grown to become Victoria's leading provider of family violence resources, training and education. It has developed strong, effective, and collaborative working relationships with government, the justice system, police, community organisations and other family violence services.

Virginia was active in the statewide networking and advocacy that has culminated formally into today's peak organisation, Domestic Violence Victoria (DV Vic). Virginia was a committed and influential member of the board of DV Vic since its formal inception in 2005, bringing a sound understanding of the political, government and social environment in which peak bodies operate.

Her exceptional and tireless contribution is grounded in her strong identity as a feminist and political activist. Virginia retired from full-time work in 2015. She continues to promote an equality and rights framework advocating for the safety of women and children, and perpetrator accountability for their use of violence.

Ms Virginia Geddes

Virginia ('Vig') Geddes is a feminist, activist, and lifelong advocate for women's rights. Virginia has nearly 40 years' experience campaigning to address and prevent violence against women and their children.

It was the late 1990s when Sally co-founded Transgender Victoria. Driven by her goals to achieve justice, equity and quality health and community service provision for trans and gender diverse (TGD) people, for more than 17 years Sally has successfully represented Transgender Victoria and the TGD issues in public forums, before the Victorian Parliament and in the media.

Sally has worked for many years with a number of Victorian and federal government departments and non-government organisations to reform discriminatory public policy and laws, participating in a number of reference groups and steering committees.

Sally has overseen Transgender Victoria's growth and development over the past two decades and has played an integral part in building its capacity to participate in public debates and influence positive policy reforms in Victoria and at the federal level.

Ms Sally Goldner

Sally Goldner has dedicated her career to making Victoria one of the best places to identify as gay, lesbian, bisexual, transgender or intersex (LGBTI). Sally has worked persistently for more than two decades to advocate for the rights and needs of LGBTI communities in Victoria and around Australia.

In 2015, Sally was recognised for her outstanding commitment, winning the LGBTI Person of the Year Award as part of the annual Gay and Lesbian Organisation of Business and Enterprise (GLOBE) community awards. Shortly after, she spent two weeks in St Petersburg, Melbourne's sister city, as a guest of the Side-By-Side LGBT Film Festival.

As part of her commitment to community advocacy and explaining TGD, bisexual and similar issues to the broader community, Sally has also been active in community media, first at Joy 94.9 and BENT TV, and since 2005 at 3CR where she hosts 'Out of the Pan' which draws attention to pansexual issues.

Sally is currently delivering LGBTI training to Victorian aged care and other service providers. A key objective of this training is to increase the number of service providers, facilities and stakeholders who are LGBTI aware, and to ensure they are resourced to incorporate LGBTI inclusive practices within person-centred models of care.

Be migrated to Australia in 1979 as a refugee, and has since committed her life in Australia to giving back and contributing to the nation's diverse and cohesive society. She is an upstanding role model for many Vietnamese women in her community—as the first female President of the Springvale Indo-Chinese Mutual Assistance Association (SICMAA) and a strong advocate for women's rights. Be approaches her work with integrity, generosity and compassion.

As a co-founder of SICMAA, Be has continued to assist many newly arrived migrants to resettle in Australia, providing language and cultural classes, welfare, and community support.

Alongside her work with SICMAA, Be also promotes and embraces Victoria's multiculturalism through her work organising the annual cultural celebrations such as the Tet Festival—a New Year celebration for Vietnamese Australians and the whole Victorian community. Be is incredibly proud of her cultural heritage, and was recently involved in events marking the 40th Anniversary of the Vietnamese Community in Australia. Her willingness to share her culture with the wider community is testament to her commitment to advancing Victoria's multiculturalism.

As part of Be's commitment to the broader Victorian community, she has organised many volunteers through her community networks and fundraised for many disaster reliefs and national causes, such as the Victorian Bush Fire Appeal, the Queensland Flood Appeal and the Red Cross Appeal.

Mrs Be Ha

Be Ha is a respected community leader and source of inspiration for many Vietnamese Australians, particularly Vietnamese women. Over many years she has dedicated her time to community advocacy and advancing multiculturalism.

From humble beginnings as a disarmament activist, to advisory roles on our Australian government's positioning at the UN Security Council, Joanna has become an influential figure in the women's rights, peace and security movements. Joanna is well-respected for her contribution to leadership in Australian international development. Notably, her dedicated work in the international women's rights movement has brought about transformational change in the Asia-Pacific region.

Joanna's indelible contribution and commitment to international development, led to her current position as Chief Executive Officer of the International Women's Development Agency (IWDA)—the leading Australian development agency for women's rights and gender equality.

Under Joanna's leadership, IWDA has experienced a significant period of growth. The organisation has expanded its partnerships across the region and established itself as a gender equality thought leader. Joanna is a key political strategist in the Australian international development community and perhaps one of her most significant contributions is her influence on policy and decision-makers to confront gender blindness in aid programming.

Ms Joanna Hayter

Joanna Hayter's outstanding service to international development, gender equality and peace building spans a career of more than 30 years, 25 countries and four continents.

Before taking up her position with IWDA, Joanna undertook a number of highly-regarded international roles as a resident Country Director in Myanmar (Burma) and Vietnam and the Regional Director for an international non-government organisation in Africa. Alongside these endeavours, she has also managed her own development consulting business for clients—including not-for-profit development organisations and multiple United Nations agencies.

Throughout her long and diverse career Joanna has acted as a mentor to generations of women working in international development and human rights in both Australia and overseas. As her roles have grown more senior, Joanna has continued to drive and facilitate collaboration in Australia and overseas to strengthen civil society responses to sustainable development, human security and social justice.

In 2013 Joanna was named one of Australia's '100 Women of Influence'. This accolade is testament to her enduring commitment to the field of international development.

From 2006 to 2011, Catherine Humphreys served as Alfred Felton Chair at the University of Melbourne's Department of Social Work and then continued as a professor of social work. During her time as Chair, Catherine has led a collaborative program of high-quality research with Victorian community sector organisations, in the areas of out-of-home-care, domestic violence and child abuse.

For more than nine years she was an active board member at the Centre for Excellence in Child and Family Welfare, the peak body for nearly 100 community service organisations in the child, youth and family services sector of Victoria. Catherine is also involved in numerous reference groups which inform government policy in the area of family violence and the vulnerable children, youth and families sector.

Catherine's commitment to inspiring the next generation of social workers is evident in her work teaching managers and front line workers in Victorian community sector organisations and government, as well as her supervision of PhD and Research Masters students at the University of Melbourne.

The exceptional nature of Catherine's work is evidenced by the emphasis she places on engaging closely with government and the not-for-profit community welfare and family violence sectors, both to conduct her research and to apply its findings to the development of changes in policy and practice.

Catherine has published extensively in the area of violence against women and children, making a substantial contribution to the research, policy and practice discourse in Australia and internationally.

Catherine's work exhibits the social worker's ethos—to intercede wherever the circumstances of those whose lives are damaged by violence can be improved; to build a system that disrupts cycles of violence and disadvantage; and to advocate strongly and protect the rights of vulnerable people. Her sustained attention to the role of statutory intervention has been used to inform child protection training and policy development in England, Scotland and Australia.

Professor Catherine Humphreys

Catherine Humphreys' work in child and family welfare has made an important contribution towards ensuring the safety of women and children, within their families and in institutional care. Her contributions are embedded in Victorian practice and will have far-reaching implications for generations of women, children and families throughout Australia and the world.

Born and raised in Ireland, Catherine migrated to Australia at the age of 18 to join the Brigidine Sisters. Moving so far away from her family and friends at a young age instilled in her an understanding of the challenges of separation and the strengths of community.

After travelling to the United Kingdom to complete her Masters degree, Catherine returned to Australia and brought new insights and learnings to Brigidine colleges across the state. Notably, at St Joseph's College Echuca, Catherine encouraged the enrolment of Koori students. Thanks to Catherine's advocacy, today St Joseph's has the largest enrolment of Koori students amongst Victorian Catholic secondary schools.

A gifted educator, Catherine made an outstanding contribution to secondary students and trainee teachers in Brigidine Colleges, but was also driven by her desire to make a real difference in the lives of those who were marginalised. Catherine was a passionate advocate for asylum seekers and refugees, and wanted to ensure that every student, regardless of their cultural background, had every opportunity to succeed. Her commitment to the resettlement of asylum seeker and refugee families led her to co-found the Brigidine Asylum Seekers Project in Albert Park, Melbourne.

Catherine firmly believed that an understanding and awareness of education was a significant investment in the future of a community. The actions of people such as Catherine will be a witness to the potential of an individual to make a difference to the lives of ordinary people. Catherine passed away in March 2015.

Sr Catherine Mary Kelly

Catherine Mary Kelly was an inspiration and role model to many in her local community and at the schools she taught. Her bravery, strength and compassion empowered many students and teachers—particularly those from marginalised backgrounds—to live meaningful lives, and her remarkable contribution will be carried on through the countless lives she touched.

Mary graduated from the University of Melbourne with an Honours degree in Pure English and a Bachelor of Laws. She began her law career in 1971. It was during this time that Mary and her fellow comedians formed the Razzle Dazzle Revue, performing in inner city venues around Melbourne such as Carlton's Pram Factory, Prahran's Reefer Cabaret, Fitzroy's Flying Trapeze Café and Collingwood's Last Laugh. These performances shaped a distinctive Australian comedic style that was revolutionary and transformative.

In 1979, with fellow performers, Mary opened the iconic Comedy Café Theatre Restaurant in Brunswick Street, Fitzroy—the first commercial performer-owned venue dedicated to the development of innovative Australian comedy. It was during this time that she pioneered a new form of comedy and, markedly, made it accessible to all Australians. Her fine comedic script writing and acting skills were further honed on the stage, on ABC radio, and on ABC TV education and current affairs programs. As half of the acclaimed comedy duo, Tim and Debbie, Mary escorted Melbourne comedy onto the television screen with the ground breaking, award winning ABC TV series, "Australia, You're Standing In It".

In recognition of her indelible contribution to Australian comedy, in 2000, Mary was awarded the Kenneth Myer Medallion for her services to performing arts. Mary is also highly regarded as a cabaret singer and has produced and performed one woman shows such as 'Lazy Crazy Love Songs' and 'Witty Songs of Witty Women' at the Fairfax Theatre and Hamer Hall.

Mary is currently working with the Andrew Grimwade Centre for Cultural Materials Conservation at the University of Melbourne on an Australian Research Council Linkage Project. Through this project, Mary is preserving the dynamic story of the development of Australian comedy across the 1960s, 1970s and 1980s.

Ms Mary Kenneally

Over more than 40 years, Mary Kenneally's contribution to the standing of women in the comedic arts has been profound. Throughout her career, Mary has mentored many women who have since become Australia's leading comedians and satirists. Her comedic journey has given a voice to women in the arts and made a significant impact on the early development of contemporary Australian comedy.

Inge's career, which spans almost eight decades, has been one of enormous artistic drive, determination and longevity. Her monumental sculptures have changed Australia's cultural landscape, and inspired generations of Australian artists.

Born in Germany in 1915, Inge began her art education in Berlin in 1937 before studying abroad in England, Scotland and the United States of America. Arriving in Australia in 1951, Inge brought with her an understanding of the latest international developments in modern art, particularly Abstract Expressionism and the works of Jackson Pollock and Barnett Newman.

Remarkably, Inge's public works were a major proponent of a generation of artists who led a dramatic shift in Australian art through their commitment to new ideas and striking modern aesthetics.

Ms Ingeborg King AM

Internationally renowned artist Ingeborg 'Inge' King has made an indelible contribution to modern Australian sculpture and today holds a distinguished place in Australian art history.

Today, Inge's work is exhibited in public collections across every corner of the nation. Her public commissions and distinctly Australian voice—which shine through in works such as 'Forward Surge' at the Arts Centre Melbourne lawn—have made her one of Australia's most prominent sculptors. Inge has exhibited work consistently in group and solo exhibitions, the most recent being a retrospective at the National Gallery of Victoria in 2014, 'Constellation', which spanned all three levels of the gallery's building in Federation Square.

Throughout her career, Inge's advocacy for contemporary art in the urban environment has resulted in more dynamic public spaces, giving Australian cities modern identities and engendering a deep commitment to the vital role contemporary art has made in our community. Inge was a founding member of the Centre 5 group alongside various other sculptors including Julius Kane and Norma Redpath, through which she worked tirelessly to bring artists and architects together to plan and modernise urban developments.

As Chief Executive Officer (CEO) of the recognised industry leader Geelong Regional Library, Patti Manolis has dedicated her career to giving communities across Victoria the best library, heritage and community experience.

Patti Manolis realised her passion for public libraries at the young age of 15 at Carringbush Regional Library. With tertiary qualifications in Librarianship and Business Studies, Patti worked in a number of senior public library positions in Victoria before being appointed CEO of the Geelong Regional Library Corporation in 2006.

Since her time as CEO, services offered by Geelong Regional Library have exceeded all national public library standards. Under her leadership the Geelong Regional Library has undergone a transformation that delivers innovative, high quality, contemporary and sustainable library services across four Local Government Authorities—the City of Greater Geelong, the Surf Coast Shire, the Golden Plains Shire and the Borough of Queenscliffe.

Patti has been instrumental in building new libraries in West Footscray, Waurin Ponds, Lara and Bannockburn and most recently the new Geelong Library and Heritage Centre. Major redevelopments of libraries also undertaken include Geelong West, Belmont, Drysdale, Torquay and mobile libraries covering 18 townships.

In 2003 Patti was awarded the State Library of Victoria's Margery C Ramsay Scholarship, funding a study tour of the library services in Timor-Leste. Following this, Patti established Libraries for Timor-Leste, which for over 10 years has supported the development of libraries and their staff in Timor-Leste.

Recently Patti was selected as the only Australian member of the Bill and Melinda Gates Foundation's inaugural International Network of Emerging Library Innovators. This has provided important opportunities for international partnerships, networking, research and continued learning.

Ms Patti Manolis

Patti Manolis has committed her career to achieving excellence in public library service provision. She is dedicated to life-long learning, the exchange of ideas and information and the empowerment of communities.

Throughout her career Georgia has championed a rights-based approach to healthcare by striving towards the principle that every person, no matter how they arrived in Australia, has an equal opportunity to achieve optimal health and wellbeing.

As the Head of The Royal Children's Hospital Immigrant Health Service, Georgia provides exceptional care to refugee children and their families, representing her patients with courage and conviction.

By addressing health inequity, Georgia has made an invaluable contribution to the sustainability of healthcare services for Victoria's culturally and linguistically diverse communities. Georgia's efforts have resulted in better screening, identification, treatment and management of illness prevention; improved cultural responsiveness; increased knowledge of the status of refugee children in Victoria; and improvements in data and reporting on vulnerable groups.

Dr Georgia Paxton

Dr Georgia Paxton has dedicated more than a decade to improving the lives of refugees and asylum seekers in an increasingly challenging environment.

Georgia has also devoted much of her time to building the capacity of the Victorian health workforce to better respond to the complex needs of refugees and asylum seekers. She has significantly improved workforce capacity by supervising 16 registrar positions. Remarkably, many of these doctors still work in migrant health.

In 2010, Georgia was awarded the Windermere Health Services Fellowship to develop an electronic health record for refugee health care in Victoria. Subsequently, Georgia's great work was also recognised when the team received an Institute of Public Administration Award in 2015.

Alongside her clinical endeavours, Georgia's commitment to social justice and upholding the human rights of refugees and asylum seekers is no less compelling. She has been instrumental in raising the profile of the diverse issues faced by refugee and asylum seeker children living in the Victorian community and those who are in held detention.

Last year, in recognition of her expertise, demonstrated commitment to immigration and humanitarian issues and community representation, Georgia was appointed to the national Minister's Council on Asylum Seekers and Detention.

Throughout her career Michelle has shown great determination to be regarded as one of the best jockeys in Victoria. Hailing from Ballarat, Michelle is the youngest of 10 children—many of whom have also pursued careers in horse racing.

A breakthrough for female jockeys in a sport dominated by men, Michelle's extraordinary 2015 Melbourne Cup victory was no easy ride to success. Her commitment, courage and drive to succeed saw her through a horrific fall early on in her career in 2004. Despite a short break from racing to recover from her injuries, Michelle's strength and resolve propelled her to continue and eventually use her Melbourne Cup win to share an important message that female jockeys should be given a fair go.

At the young age of 15, Michelle rode and won her first race on Reigning, a horse trained by her father. In 2009, Michelle became the third female jockey to ride in the Caulfield Cup. Michelle's first Melbourne Cup was in the same year when she raced Allez Wonder, which placed sixteenth out of 23 starters.

Michelle's incredible story and journey is an inspiration to so many Victorians. Throughout her career she has set an example for both her fellow jockeys and for future generations. Her remarkable achievement and continued determination will inspire Victorians of all ages to reach their potential across many fields of endeavour.

Ms Michelle Payne

On Tuesday 3 November 2015, Michelle Payne made national history, becoming the first female jockey to win the prestigious Melbourne Cup.

Throughout her career, Colleen has assisted some of the most vulnerable individuals and communities in Victoria, managing community and health services in government and non-government sectors across the state.

After graduating from the Australian National University with a Bachelor of Arts in 1977, Colleen commenced her career as an Information Officer for Disadvantaged Groups within the Department of Social Security in Sydney. Since then, much of Colleen's work has taken place with culturally and linguistically diverse communities.

Colleen has worked for the former Department of Justice, where her roles included responsibility for the department's Disability Action Plan and Cultural Diversity Plan and managing the development of the Victims' Charter Act 2006.

As a result of her commitment and expertise, in 2007 Colleen was appointed Victoria's fourth Public Advocate and has raised the profile of that role in the community through her sustained public advocacy.

Ms Colleen Pearce

For more than 40 years, Colleen has been committed to helping those experiencing social disadvantage. As the longest serving Public Advocate and first female in the role, she has been outspoken and fearless, particularly in addressing abuse and violence towards people with a disability or mental illness.

The legacy of Colleen's commitment to public administration, community service and advocacy is evident in the lasting influence on services she has designed and delivered, from her early involvement in advocacy as a community education worker for the Women's Council on Homelessness and Addiction, to her current senior statutory role.

In addition to her professional roles, Colleen has committed her time to numerous boards. In 2012 she was appointed as a member of the Victorian Equal Opportunity and Human Rights Commission for a five-year term and is a member of the boards of Wintringham, a specialist aged care service assisting homeless elderly men and women, and Connecting Home, a service established to assist the Stolen Generation.

Colleen is a member of the Yuin mob from southern New South Wales.

Fay's advocacy for people with a disability spans three decades. Her endless crusade for a fair, better and just world for all began when she was appointed as a Community Visitor under the Intellectual Disabled Persons' Services Act 1986 (now replaced by the Disability Act 2006). Over 27 years later, Fay remains a volunteer Community Visitor for the Office of the Public Advocate.

Her advocacy and compassion for people with a disability has resulted in profound and long-term changes and benefits for residents across the state. One of her greatest achievements was her advocacy work at Kew Residential Services, which assisted towards the closure of the facility and a better life and outcome for more than 480 residents. Her advocacy did not end there. After its closure, Fay continued to advocate for the needs of the Kew residents as they moved away from the institutional environment into the wider Victorian community.

As a board member on the Disability Services Board for the Community Visitors Program, Fay has also been responsible for preparing Community Visitors Annual Reports to State Parliament and advocating on key strategic, policy and operational issues.

Fay continues to work tirelessly to support people with a disability and ensure their issues are on the public agenda. She is well-respected by all who have worked with her—for her independence, her constructive approach and her humble, yet influential, manner.

Fay has recruited and mentored numerous volunteers to take on the role of a Community Visitor. Fay has provided exceptional leadership to these volunteers and has trained them to a very high standard. Her work has ensured that when she no longer performs her role, there are others who can take her place to safeguard the rights of people with a disability.

Mrs Fay Patricia Richards

Fay Patricia Richards has made it her mission to affect long term and positive change in the lives of people with a disability in the Victorian community.

Over many years, Patricia's legal work and expertise has both directly and indirectly advanced the quality of life of many Victorians, enriched Victoria's legal discourse and contributed to an increased awareness of human and legal rights issues and employer's responsibilities.

As a dedicated volunteer, director and founding board member with WISE Employment, Patricia's passion, drive and direction has been instrumental in the growth of the organisation. This has facilitated the provision of training and meaningful employment to those who experience disability and mental illness, as well as youth, ex-offenders, refugees and Aboriginal communities.

Significantly, Patricia's voluntary work with WISE Employment in Australia and WISE Ability in the United Kingdom has empowered thousands of disabled and marginalised individuals in the local, Victorian, Australian and international community, through the provision of training and employment support services.

Alongside her legal representation, Patricia is also a passionate voluntary board member to the Seaworks Foundation. Seaworks is a highly valued local community resource at the Port of Williamstown which has held events of local, Victorian and national significance. This has included local markets and festivals, Victorian Food and Wine Festival events, music festivals and maritime events, such as hosting the International Tall Ships event in 2013. In this role Patricia has provided invaluable direction, advice and support to the restoration, preservation and activation of the local maritime precinct. Her voluntary work has actively contributed to the sustainable operation and growth of the organisation, facilitating the preservation and activation of the Seaworks site.

Ms Patricia Toop OAM

For more than 34 years Patricia ('Patsy') Toop has provided legal representation to a great many Victorian workers in cases of personal injury, such as asbestos related illness, chemical induced illness, workplace injury and death and mental illness. Through this work Patricia has significantly contributed to the progression of Victoria's social and legal discourse in human rights and worker's rights, particularly in cases of personal injury and illness.

Aunty Joan's exceptional work and innovation in Aboriginal health, justice and alcohol and drug rehabilitation has significantly improved outcomes for Aboriginal people and helped to build a greater awareness and understanding of the issues Aboriginal communities face in Victoria and beyond. Aunty Joan has been influential in the development of government policy on Aboriginal health and has helped shape the planning and delivery of services.

In 1975, Aunty Joan helped establish what is today known as the Ngwala Willumbong Co-operative – meaning 'Dry Place'. Ngwala Willumbong now operates in four locations across Victoria, delivering rehabilitation and outreach services to Aboriginal people impacted by substance abuse. In this same year, Aunty Joan also joined the Victorian Department of Health as one of the first Aboriginal Health Aides.

In 1982, as the first Aboriginal Liaison Officer at St Vincent's Hospital, Aunty Joan instigated a monthly support group for diabetic patients and developed a program of special camps to raise awareness and understanding of diabetes within Aboriginal families.

Her dedication to Aboriginal health led her to establish a dedicated Koori Diabetes Service in Victoria, which paved the way for similar services being initiated across Australia.

Aunty Joan's life-long commitment to helping others has been recognised through the many accolades she has received. Impressively, in 2005 when Aunty Joan completed her Master of Public Health at the Institute of Koorie Education at Deakin University, she was also made an Officer of the Order of Australia. In 2011, Aunty Joan was inducted to the inaugural Victorian Aboriginal Honour Roll.

Although Aunty Joan's primary focus has been on improving Aboriginal health, she has also significantly influenced government policy, improved the planning and delivery of front line services and fostered the development of Aboriginal community controlled providers to deliver health and other services across the state.

Aunty Joan remains active in advocating for the Aboriginal community through her roles as an Elder in the Broadmeadows Magistrate Court and the Melbourne County Court, Chairperson of the board at the Institute of Koorie Education at Deakin University, and her involvement in a range of government and non-government advisory committees.

Aunty Joan Agnes Vickery AO

A Gunditjmara Elder born in Portland, western Victoria, Aunty Joan Agnes Vickery has devoted her life to achieving better outcomes for Aboriginal people, particularly in the area of health.
