

As COP27 closes, you are warmly invited to join our post-COP27 webinar - COP27: Where to from here for the Pacific? - which will take place on Thursday 24 November 6pm AEDT.

This year, we were honoured to fund a number of Pacific Islander delegates to attend the COP in Egypt, some of whom will join us for this webinar.

In the words of Maria Tiimon Chi-Fang, our Pacific Outreach Officer, who attended COP27:

"We have seen a big push on loss and damage and adaptation from our Pacific leaders; our Pacific leaders are at the negotiations day and night...before this COP27 the wealthy countries like Australia promised to take strong action on climate change but what we see now, once again, is that the wealthy countries seem to be shifting away from their promises."

Hear more from Maria reporting from COP27 here.

Despite what looks to be a rather underwhelming COP, there is, however, a glimour of light: Australia's announcement that it will seek to co-host COP31 with the Pacific.

Already, Vanuatu has stated that it will not support Australia's co-hosting of COP31 unless it stops subsidising fossil fuel projects.

How likely are other Pacific Islander nations to follow?

Come and find out by registering to attend our post COP27 webinar here.

We look very much forward to seeing you there.

Warmly,

Corinne Fagueret, Coordinator Pacific Calling Partnership (PCP), and all of us in the PCP Team and Edmund Rice Centre

Edmund Rice Centre
<http://www.erc.org.au/>

